WHO ARE WE?

The Community Social Planning Council is a non-profit charitable organization governed by a community-based Board of Directors.

Our work is funded by grants from foundations and local governments, donations from individuals, fee-for-service contracts and earned revenue from community programs. We collect annual dues from our membership, and charitable donations, to keep our work moving forward.

"The Community Social Planning Council excels at innovation, collaboration, and research. They build and share knowledge so that everyone in the community gains from strengths and insights."

~ Lisa Mort-Putland,
Executive Director,
VolunteerVictoria

"The Council has a rich history in Victoria and when our Foundation was looking for a partner for our work in the Capital Region, the Community Social Planning Council was a natural choice. They have their ear to the ground, and strive to empower communities to make systemic changes."

~ Tracy Horner Cullen,
The Horner Foundation

WHAT DO WE DO?

The Community Social Planning Council develops solutions-oriented programs and initiatives to respond to emerging social issues in the region.

Through our community development and engagement programs, we work directly with citizens, community organizations and institutions on the concerns they have for the future of their communities. We manage programs, the BC Transit Ticket Assistance Program for example, that directly benefit individuals and households on low-income and seek to enhance social equity. We also design and deliver community education programs to give residents opportunities to learn from one another and take informed action on community priorities.

The Council develops new programs and initiatives to improve social conditions, and achieve sustainable livelihoods for all residents. We also partner with other organizations in joint ventures and provide contract services to a range of client organizations.

We monitor socio-economic trends and report to the public on social and economic conditions. We use social and traditional media to keep residents informed and provide opportunities for engagement in their community.

Members of the Council help direct our work and priorities through our Annual General Meeting, and through working committees that bring stakeholders together from diverse sectors to guide ongoing programs.

“Over the years, the United Way has worked closely with the Community Social Planning Council and their research has helped inform our decisions about investing in change in this community. They are highly supportive of the community’s research needs and are knowledgeable about the issues that affect this region.”

~ Linda Hughes, CEO,
United Way of Greater Victoria
